A graduate of the University of Los Andes in Venezuela, Ceballos moved to California at the age of 20 and later worked at McDonald's and other places. He also managed the US National Boxing Federation and served as a referee in his native land for a number of years. In 2006, he began to work at EchoStar in New York. After a year, he moved to the home of his new wife, Yvonne Hufnagel. Ceballos is now president of the EchoStar Sports group, which is the parent company of the Big Ten Network, the Big 12 Network, Fox Soccer Plus, Fox Sports 1 and Fox Sports 2. "I feel the biggest difference is the scale and the speed," Ceballos told TheWrap. "There is a lot more money, but the time you have to spend on television is shorter. Now you're no longer required to create a 30-minute show, but you're required to complete a 10-minute show within the time given." However, Ceballos said he is happy with the Fox networks' arrangement with the Big Ten and Big 12. "I feel Fox has a fair relationship with the leagues, that they don't carry too much of the load," he said. "I'm sure [Fox has] negotiated well with the leagues. It's a good model for us all. We've been working on it together, and I think it's a good product." Ceballos also confirmed that he would be leaving his position as president of the sports division at the end of the year b7e8fdf5c8
